Alice Harrison, long a favorite in California, made her re-entrance there, recently, at the Bush Street Theatre, San Francisco, together with her brother, Mr. Louis Harrison, in "Photos." The Chronicle, of that city, records her success, as tollows: "The plain purpose be ng laughter, the entertainment may be said to achieve to end with distinct success. Mixed with the absurd ties there are many clever bits of satire on actors, plays, and things generally, and the business is unusually clever, complete and ludicrous. After Harrison is one of the most talented soubrettes on the stage-one of the few legitimate actresses who have not rained themselves tew legitimate actresses who have not rained themselves in the combination system. She never was thoroughly amonable to the lines and business of the author, and always had a way of her own, which the California audiences liked. In this piece she is at home and unfettered. She has improved, less in singing than in singing effectively, and sine does her secures in this with all the old chic and peculiar grace. Her reception was enthusistic, Louis Harrison has developed a strong eccentric vain of burlesque, but his besting sin is overacting. The screams that greeted most of his points were sufficient to show that he had unade a hit."

THE FIRE RECORD.

LOSS OF LIFE IN JERSEY CITY. A fire broke out about 11 o'clock last night in an old frame building at No. 104 Greene-st., Jersey City, and in a few minutes the entire building was enveloped in flames. The lower portion was occupied by Edmund Sweetwood as a rum-shop, and he had the upper part fitted up as a cheap lodginguse. The place is usually filled with lodgers, bu last night there were only a few there. James Cally, sixty-five, was awakened by the flame smoke, and jumped out of the second-story low to the sidewalk, sustaining probbrindow to the sidewalk, sustaining probably fatal injuries. When Cully came to the window, another man was seen behind him, but he was apparently afraid to jump, and drew back. It was thought at first that he had escaped by a rear entrance, but after the fire had been extinguished a man's body, which was burned almost to a crisp and not recognizable, was found in the ruins. Up to midnight no other bodies were discovered, and it could not be determined whether any other lives were lost or not.
The building was destroyed and the loss is estimated at $1,500.

FLAMES IN PINE STREET.

A fire broke out late last night in the fourth tory of No. 82 Pine-st., and extended to No 80 before it could be checked, the buildings being connected and owned by a man named Finn. The top stories were occupied by Junquera Guerra, manufacturers of cigars; the ground floor of No. 82 was occupied by Blackwood & Douglass, stationers, and the ground by Blackwood & Douglass, stationers, and the ground Boor of No. 80 was used by Fidel Fernandez, an importer of tobacco leaf. The second floor of No. 82 was used by George W. Haws, a dealer in lubricating cils. The fire originated on the fourth floor of No. 82. The two buildings were guited, the damage to them being estimated at $2,000. The losses of the occupants could not be incurately ascertained, but are believed to be as Follows: Junqueera & Guerra, $5,000; F. Fernandez, $2,000: Blackwood and Douglass, $2,000, and George W. Haws, $500.

GENERAL BUTLER AND THE PRESIDENCY

Governor Butler passed through the city recently on his way from Washington to Boston. After h had left the capital a story was published that while there he had talked freely with his friends about the next Presidential campaign. It was tated that he had declared it to be his intention to orce himself as a candidate before the Democratic onvention, because he was sure of the New-Engand delegates. A TRIBUNE reporter saw Governor Butler yesterday. In answer to a question he

"There is not a word of truth in the report. While I was in Washington I did not talk to any one about the campaign; much less did I declare hyself to be a candidate. I am not a candidate, and have not got the Presidential bee in my bon-bet."

BEAUREGARD AND CHALMETTE.

To the Editor of The Tribune.

SIR: THE TRIBUNE, in a recent paragraph, speaking of the conduct of ex-Governor John McEnery as counsel for the State of Louisiana in proceedings for the recovery of certain swamp lands donated to the e Federal Government, through which Gov ernor McEnery was to have a share in the recovery, cenured the proceeding as a scheme of tand-jobbers, adding that the Chalmette battle-ground, the scene of Jackson's victory over the British, would thereby fall into their s. The article also represents General Beaure gard as having aided these proceedings to the consequent gard as having aided these proceedings to the consequent prejudice of that historic field as public property.

I desire to stake, apon the authority of the General, that he has had no concern whatever with the matter or knowledge of it, except from what has appeared in the public prints. The error seems to have arisen from the fact that, in the course of the proceedings, an affidavit as to the former condition of the land was made by another person named Beauregard—himself, I may add, a bean of integrity and exceited standing at home.

FOREIGN NEWS.

THE CONDITION OF OUREN VICTORIA. LONDON, April 4 .- The recovery of the Queen ess rapid than her physicians had reason to expect. While the mjury to her knee is by no means serious, it is feared that it may indirectly affect her accustomed good health by causing her to lose the daily outdoor exercise with which she has been in the habit of refreshing herself. Dr. Jenner, Physician in Ordinary to the Queen, has directed that she take almost complete rest as the best means of preventing swelling in the injured part and of reducing the pain. This course will, it is believed, soon reduce the slight inflammation and give Her Majesty the full use of her leg. A dispatch from Windsor Castle, dated 2 p. m. says that the Queen's general health continues excellent, despite the precautionary safeguards as to exercise which her physician has imposed, and that, although not permitted to walk yet, she took a drive during the forenoon with the Princess Beatrice.

BOOTH AS OTHELLO IN VIENNA. VIENNA, April 4.-Edwin Booth's impersonation to-night of the character of Othello was loudly applauded. The closing scenes, however, although

JULIAN HAWTHORNE'S NOVEL.

A FINAL UTTERANCE AS TO "FORTUNE'S FOOL"

FROM THE AUTH R.
To the Editor of The Tribune. SIR: The allusion to my affairs in last Sunday's cable letter from your London correspondent reminds me of your kind suggestion to me the other day, and, with some reluctance, I avail myself of it. I cannot, indeed, but feel flattered that a question concerning a novel of my own writing should attain such international importance as to demand repeated discussion by submarine telegraph; but I feel, at the same time, that almost enough has been said, and that I ought, in fairness, to allow opportunity for the transmission of other news of gen eral (if inferior) interest. The gist of the charge against me seems to be breach of contract on my part with the English publishers of my novel Fortune's Fool," After having received payment in full for what I engaged to write I neglected to complete the work, turned a deaf ear to all remonstrances, and, abandoning my publishers to the indignation of their readers, callously applied myself to other matters. This is the accusation.

Now, my written agreement with my English publishers sets forth that I am to furnish them with a serial story of a certain length for their magazine; that they are to pay me for it £500 in all, and that this payment is to be made in sums corresponding to the length of the various instalments that I from time to time send in to them. Subsequently this agreement was modified as follows: in consideration of a further payment of £100 I was to make over to the publishers all my English rights in the book after it should appear in book-form; but that, on the other hand, £50 should be deducted from this grand total of £600, in consideration of the fact that the various instalments were written in advance of the time that it was possible to publish them in the magazine.

In accordance with this agreement I wrote 'Fortune's Fool" in about five months, receiving £450 for the serial, and subsequently £100 for the entire English copyright. The English publishers were also desirous to purchase the American copyright, but this proposition I declined to entertain. After the last payment had been made, I detertermined to modify the conclusion of the novel and, the English publishers consenting, I withdrew the last two monthly instalments for the purpose of rewriting them. I had at that time nearly or quite : year in which to make the alterations, for the publication of the serial had scarcely been begun in the magazine. On my return to this country a year ago last swinter I brought the debutable chapters with me, and during the ensuing spring I rewrote them, with the exception of a few concluding pages. This manuscrapt, with a bundle of printed proof which I kept for reference, was lost soon afterward in the process of moving from Boston to New-Bedford and thence to New-York, and my best efforts to find it were unsuccessful. It therefore became necessary to write the final instalment a third time. An enterprise like this is fraught with peculiar difficulties, which, perhaps, only a novelist can appreciate. The subject, however enthrailing to the reader, has become dismally stale to the writer, and he is under constant apprehension lest want he writes should uppear insipid and perfunctory. After several attempts I found that my only chance of success was to dramiss the whole subject from my thoughts until such time as I could return to it with a certain feel-ing of freshness and novelty. But circumstances, unnecessary to particular ze here, occurred during the summer which incapacitated me temporarily for imaginative work. Meanwhile, June or thereabouts, I received a letter from my English publishers (the only one I have seen from them, though I understand that others have been written), calling my attention to the fact that the conclusion of the work was not in their hands. Finally, fast winter, I took up the work once more, and rewrote for the second time the first of the two final instalments. On March 9 last, I sent this instalment to the English publishers, with prison, has written a vigorous letter to the Young fre-land Society, of Glasgow, in which he says that the dy-namite policy can only have the effect of exisperating the English Democracy. He doclars that it would be far better to work and wait for another twenty years than to play into the hands of freignal's engines by giv-ing rein to despair and revenge.

a letter in which I incidentally recapitalisted the various statements contained in the present com-munication. On March 11 appeared the paragraph in your cable letter asserting that I had never than to play into the hands of freignal's engines by giv-ing rein to despair and revenge.

Bived near Tarrytown, by whom he had two more children. Mr. Davids, like his father, was a promi-inent Democrat, and was several times elected to represent his town in the Board of Supervisors. DUBLIN, April 4.-Michael Davitt, from his a letter in which I incidentally recapitulated the English publishers, dated March 20, acknowledging the receipt of the MSS, and facility accepting my statement (denied in the cablegram) that the conusion of the novel had been in their hands, inally, on April 1, appeared the second telegram om your correspondent reaffirming the original charge. Now, this charge turns upon a technical point, un-Now, this charge turns upon a technical point, unimportant to the real question. What the publishers assert is, not that the conclusion was never written, but that they never saw or received it. All I have to offer in reouttai is, toat I received payment for it under the agreement. Either they must have received it, therefore, or (what amounts to the same thing) they must have had satisfactory evidence that it was written. For my part, I am pericully willing to give them whatever benefit is to be derived from the alternative. I will only add that my persenal relations with them have always been pleasant and cordial, and that I cherish a hope that the submarine cable will not irreparably antagonize us. At all events, this is my first and final utterance on the subject. I am, sit, yours sincerely, Julian Hawiborne.

DYING IN A HOTEL.

SUPPOSED SUICIDE OF GEORGE W. DAVIDS. THE EX-TREASURER OF WESTCHESTER COUNTY

TAKES AN OVERDOSE OF LAUDANUM. George W. Davids, a member of the firm of Thaddens Davids & Co., manufacturers of writing materials, at Nos. 127 and 129 William-st., died at the Grand Union Hotel, yesterday after-noon, under circumstances which led to the belief that he had committed suicide. He was a son of Thaddeus Davids, the head of the firm, who is now in Florida travelling for his health. His home was in New-Rochelle, and he often went into the Grand Union Hotel for refreshments while waiting for a train to start from the Grand Central Depot. But he had not been known to occupy a room in the hotel until Tuesday night. It was after midnight when he paid for a room, and the hotel clerk did not take particular notice of him at the time, Mr. Davids wrote his name in the register, giving his residence as New Rochelle, and the slerk sent him to room No. 599, on an upper floor. He had no baggage.

At 11:30 o'clock in the morning, a woman servant at the hotel knocked on the door of the room occupied by Mr. Davids, and he told her to go away and not to disturb him. "If you want any more money," he said, "I will pay it, but I want to be left in quiet." His tone indicated that he was angry at being disturbed. The woman told Mr. Garrison, the manager of the hotel, what Mr. Davids had said, and the servants were instructed not to disturb him again. Shortly before 2 p. m. Mr. Garrison was in the upper the house and his attention was attracted by groans in Mr. Davids's room. He placed his car against the door and heard heavy breathing. Then he knocked loudly several times, but received no answer. The door was locked on the inside. A porter was summoned and the transom over the door was taken out. One of the hall boys then crawled through the opening and unlocked the door. Mr. Davids was found insensible in the bed. He had taken off his outer clothing only, and he lay on his back, with his head propped up with pillows, On a dressing-table near the bed was a two-ounce bottle balf full of a dark colored liquid. The label had been scraped off, but a servant found the torn pieces in a slop jar. When they were put together it was discovered by the writing that the bottle had contained laudanum, purchased at Hudnut's

MR, DAVIDS'S DIAMOND STUD GONE. A physician was sent for, but Mr. Davids was already beyond the reach of medical aid. He died at 2:15. His pockets were a arched, but no writing was found to explain his death. In the pockets were found about $16 in bank notes and change, a zold watch and chain, a pair of gold eyeglasses and a few other articles of small value, Mr. Garrison telegraphed to the station agent at New-Rochelle, asking him to inform relatives that the body of Mr. Davids was lying at the hotel. In response to the message a son of Mr. Davids and an uniertaker, named Davis, came to the city by the first train for the body. David F. Davids, a brother of the dead man, also visited the hotel later in the of the deal man, also visited the hotel later in the atternoon. He thought that his brother usually were a dnamend stat, but only a pinin gold stad was found in the dead man's short yasterday. Information of the suicide was sent to the Coroner's Office, and a brother of Coroner Konnedy went to the hotel, intending to remove the body. The undertaker from New Rochelle said that he had been requested by the relatives to take charge of it. Coroner Konnedy are accepted later, and it was decided that he Keme ty arrived later, and it was decided that he should have the body shipped to New-Rochelle, at the expense of the undertaker from that place. The body was accordingly removed from the both late in the afternoon to Taylor & Co.'s undertaking shop, in East Forty-first-st.

The diamond stud which Mr. Davids had been accustomed to wear cost $2,800. He had worn it for several years, as was well known to his acquaintspeaking of this, the Coroner said last night: "I do not think that any one could have changed the stude at the hotel, as there was no chance for it. I am inclines to believe that Mr. Davids na wheel the solitaire himself and then used the gold one in its place."

Mr. Davids was the eldest son of Thaddeus Davids He was married to Miss Huntington, a sister of ex-Assemblyman Lawrence D. Huntington, of Newfive children. She died some years ago, and he was subsequently married to a young woman who the Republican candidate and the incumbent. Cromwell called upon Mr. the Republican candidate and the present incumbent. Cromwell called upon Mr. Davids to refund to the county certain sums of money which he had retained as his commission upon moneys which had passed througa his hands in settling accounts with the State Con-troller. The Board of Supervisors authorized the present County Transurer to sue Mr. Davids for the amount alleged to be due the county. The trial resulted adversely to Davids, who appealed the case, but higher courts affirmed the decision. Judgment was recently entered against him for the amount due.

It was statied some six months ago by a person who had access to the books of the firm of T. Davids & Co. that there were a number of glaring discrepancies in the accounts, and that a receiver would be appointed to settle up the affairs of the concern. The dead man devied that such was the case and assured an intimate acquaintainee that the business of the firm was never in a more prospecture. the amount due. usiness of the firm was never in a more prosperous ondition than at that time. He had been in the habit of taking it to relieve him of severe abdominal pains. At Hindmut's pharmacy the poison-book shows this entry, made on Tuesday: "Thad, Davids entry, made on Tuesday: "Thad, Davids entry, made on Tuesday: "Thad, Davids entry, made on Tuesday and asked for two ounces of landamum, To Mr. Bancroft, the clerk, he said: "You ought to know who I am. You buy ink of me, My name is Davids."

Mr. Davids took letters from his pocket addressed to Thaddens Davids & Co., and said that he had just got them from the Post Office. He joked and talked freely. He stated that he wished the landamum for family use and that he often bought it by the pint at Schieffein's, in Williams, to, but that he did not wish to trouble the firm with a small purchase. Mr. Bancroft, believing everything all right, put up the poison and made the entry in the book not exactly understanding the name, as he did not scan be the tear of cash. exactly understanding the name, as he did not scan het letters closely.

COMMENTS IN NEW-ROCHELLE. Mr. Davids's death was the universal topic of conversation at New-Rochelle last evening, and various were the reasons assigned for it. His widow and his brothers, gathered at the stately homestead on Eche-ave., where for the last fifteen years Mr. Davids has made his home, were utterly prostrated by the sudden and unexpected blow. One of his friends told the following facts about his life last night: " Mr. Davids was born in this city in 1835. He received a common school education, and then went into business with his father, the well-known went into business with his father, the well-known manufacturer of ink, soon becoming, with his brother, David F. Davids, a member of the firm. He lived in a very expensive manner and spent his money with the greatest liberality. When the Tweed rigime was at its height Mr. Davids joined a party of ring-men, who attempted to corner Hannibal and St. Joseph stock, but the syndicate got badly beaten by Boston operators and Mr. Davids lost heavily. For the last ten years he has had almost exclusive control of the business of the firm of which he was a member. At one time, however, his name was temporarily withdrawn from the firm on account, it is thought of his being financially embarrassed. Though Mr. Davids always spent money with a free hand and lived well, he has lately been living much more economically than formerly. He has lately been suffering from gout, but was always cheerful and apparently in the best of spirits. His property is said to be heavily mortgaged. Mr. Davids was treasurer of the Stationers' Board of Trade and one of the trustees of the Board of Trade and Transportation."

OTHER CASES OF SUICIDE.

Nathan S. Morse, the business manager of The Daily News shot himself through the head early yesterday morning in the office of the paper in Park Row and died instantly. His health for some time had been very bad and latterly he had been troubled with elecplessness. The growing feeling of inability to work preyed on his mind greatly and it is supposed he was insane when he took his life. His business troubles of any kind. Yesterday morning be entered his office at the usual hour and went to an inner room on the ground floor, where his desk stood. A shot was heard. The clerks rushed in and found him dead on its floor. Mr. Morse was a native of Hartford, Conn., was fifty-five years of age and was unmarried.

THE DAKOTA CAPITAL COMMISSION.

IBY TELEGRAPH TO THE TRIBUNE. CANTON, Dak., April 4.-The commission for ne removal of the Capital of the Territory, which skilfully evaded the vigilance of Yankton officials, and escaped a service of an injunction by organizing on a train while riding through Yankton early in the morning, held a meeting here, elected officers and adjourned to meet here again on May 1. The required them to hold their first meeting in Yankton, which they did. The people of the Territory are very angey, as they think the com-mission was insignated by Governor Oriway. Others are simply assing in furtherance of a grand real estate enterprise, in which all expect to make fortunes.
